Peter,
I don't think there are any copyright issues in using the plan you've attached as it was prepared by TfL for the purposes of public consultation.
I've also seen a computer generated illustration of the scheme which, I think, was published in the Standard. I'll see if we've got it somewhere.

Thanks – I used the wording in the consultation response – but perhaps floating islands would be better still. The pdf is a plan of the changes though I've asked Alastair if there's anything we've got that we could use to make it more vivid.

Quick thoughts. PDF is too big to open on my iPad, but aren't they called 'island' bus stops (not bypasses?). Please insert London after Evelina, and a bit after that 'busy' before hospital. I think we need the word patients in the bit about vulnerable road users and maybe even 'many of whom are elderly'.

Here's a first go at the text for a petition – comments and views, please. I think the question needs to be simple but there's probably room for a bit more explanatory text if you think it would help – but again, I believe that less is more. I'm thinking the pdf plan could be a part of this to show what's intended though I'm not clear about the copyright situation at the moment.

Can I have views by midday Tuesday, please.
